New Series of the Congressional Globe and Appendix.

CONGRESS, at its last session, through the Joint Library Committee of the two Houses, having authorized a large subscription for the Congressional Globe and Appendix, and the Senate, by resolution, having directed the mode of preparing the reports of its proceedings, and authorized the Secretary of the Senate to contract with the undersigned, stipulating that the reports when written out shall be subject to the revision of the Speakers, the Congressional Globe and Appendix is now offered to the public, not only as an authentic, but as an official report of the proceedings of Congress, made under the eye, and published by authority of the body.

The undersigned originated the mode of journalizing the proceedings of Congress, which, thus adopted, is to be perfected with the aid and under the supervision of Congress. Their publication was the first and only one that gave each successive step in every measure in both branches of Congress; a brief of all the debates; every important vote; and an appendix, including at full length all the revised speeches delivered during the session.

The work, as it is now to be conducted by them, will be found a most perfect political history. The senators from the States, and the representatives from every section of the Union bring with them into Congress a knowledge of the feelings, sentiments, and interests of their several constituencies. Public opinion and the public information, as it exists among those they represent, are embodied by them; and in the crucible of Congress the wisdom of our times is brought to its test, and is there concentrated, in directing the political movements of the whole country. The impulses thus given through Congress from every quarter, react upon the nation as a whole, and all its component parts are made to move in co-operation. The press cannot be more usefully employed than in condensing and again spreading abroad the intelligence of our free country, tending to such happy results through our almost miraculously adjusted State and national institutions.

Having identified ourselves with the plan of advancing the usefulness of Congress by publishing full and impartial reports, and having a large mass of the Congressional Globe and Appendix, issued during the last twelve years, which would be impaired in value to us, and utility to the public, if the work were discontinued, we have a double motive to prompt us to extend it through a new series. We are resolved, if possible, to give it permanence, and to hand it down to successors as a standard work; worthy of being maintained and improved. We shall enter upon our new undertaking without being distracted or burdened by any associate labors of the press; and, thus unencumbered, shall hope to make the new series a step in advance of the former in all points of execution. With a view to accomplish this, we shall be (one or the other) in attendance on Congress.

The reports will not be affected by our party bias. We believe every member of Congress will bear witness that our reports are full and fair.

The Congressional Globe is made up of the daily proceedings of the two Houses of Congress, and printed on superfine double-royal paper, with small type, (brevier and nonpareil,) in quarto form, each number containing sixteen royal quarto pages. The speeches of the members, in this first form, are condensed—the full report of the prepared speeches being reserved for the Appendix. All resolutions, motions, and other proceedings, are given in the form of the Journal, with the yeas and nays on every important question.

The Appendix is made up of the President's annual message, the reports of the principal officers of the government that accompany it, and all speeches of members of Congress, written out or revised by themselves. It is printed in the same form as the Congressional Globe, and usually makes about the same number of pages during a session.

During the first month or six weeks of a session, there is rarely more business done than will make two numbers a week—one of the Congressional Globe and one of the Appendix; but during the remainder of a session, there is usually sufficient matter for two or three numbers of each every week. Therefore, we calculate that the Congressional Globe and Appendix together will make near 1500 large quarto pages, printed in small type. We furnish complete indexes to both at the end of a session.

We have on hand the Congressional Globe and Appendix for the last fifteen sessions of Congress, making together fifteen large royal quarto volumes, which we will sell, unbound, for $41; or bound, with Russia backs and corners, for $56. Those who want the back volumes should apply for them immediately, as they are in demand. Congress subscribed for 341 complete sets during the two last sessions. The proceedings of Congress for the last nine years cannot be procured from any other source—Gales & Seaton having stopped printing their Register of Debates in 1837.

We will endeavor to print a sufficient number of surplus copies to supply all that may be mislaid, or lost in the mails; but subscribers should be very particular to file their papers carefully, for fear that we should not be able to supply all the lost numbers.

TERMS:
For one copy of the Congressional Globe $1 00
For one copy of the Appendix 1 00
For six copies of either, or part of both 5 00
The money may be remitted by mail at our risk.

The safest and best way to remit is, to pay the amount to the post master where you reside, and take from him a receipt, according to the following form:

POST OFFICE, _____, 184 ____
Received from A B _____ dollars _____ cents, for the Globe, from which I have deducted one per cent., and charged myself, in my account with the General Post Office, with the balance. The postmaster of Washington city will pay that balance to Blair & Rives, or to their order on the back of this receipt.

The rules of the General Post Office Department authorize such receipts to be given, and paid here, when the amount does not exceed $10. When it exceeds $10, it is best to remit as much as possible in bank notes, and the postmaster's receipt for the balance. The postmaster's receipt should be sent directed to us, and not to the postmaster of this city, as some persons are in the habit of doing. The money should be here by the 7th of December, at farthest, to procure all the numbers. If not here by that time, we may not be able to furnish the first numbers.

Our prices for these papers are so low that we cannot afford to credit them out; therefore, no person need consume his time in writing for them unless he sends the money.

LINES.—BY J. C. M*
Be still fond heart, ah! ne'er betray
That Love has found thy cell,
And let no another's sigh declare,
Affection, there does dwell;
But let me, when I Harry meet
Hide each confiding smile;
Oh! let not his discerning eye,
Discover Cupid's wife!

Let rapture break its first surprise
Upon his doating heart,
Let transport blow her clarion loud,
To say we ne'er shall part;
Let constancy entwine the wreath
That graces hymen's hand,
And all the loves proclaim the joys
Of wedlock's happy band.

THE FOREIGN NEWS.

After carefully looking over our files by the Steamer, we have come to the conclusion that the subject of the greatest interest to this country, is the threatened scarcity of food, not only in Great Britain but on the continent. The foreign journals it is true, devote much attention to the late alliance between a French prince and a Spanish prince. On the union of these young people in marriage, the prospects of two great nations are contingent, and the policy of other countries turns. How fortunate for us that we have institutions, laws, and a position not to be affected by the personal connections of any man or woman. A republic like ours, is like a pyramid whose base rests firmly on the people; the ruler, though at the summit, is but a single stone of the structure, easily moved and easily placed there. A monarchy is a pyramid reversed. It rests on a single point—the Sovereign; and he is compelled to seek almost constantly for support in every direction, lest he may be crushed by the weight, or the pile topple over and fall upon him!

This is one of the reasons why royal alliances have been sought by men even as powerful as Napoleon and Louis Philippe; and we therefore perceive that a question which to us is one of entire difference, is very differently treated in the foreign journals.

But the marriages of Princes cannot render a starving people contented, and there is no longer any doubt that a partial famine exists in Scotland, Ireland, and in some parts of France. The loss of the Potato crop has had a direct influence in creating the present destitution in Ireland. To want of food are succeeding the various malignant diseases which follow in the train of famine; and the alarm is so great that the Government is obliged to provide large quantities of food at the cost of the Treasury to be distributed among the starving peasantry! It is probable that the next steamer will bring us the news that the ports have been opened to every species of provisions; and we find the English press exulting, as well it may at the fact that the United States has a large surplus of product on hand, sufficient for the emergency.

And it is exceedingly fortunate for this country, just now, that we have,—for,—as a consequence of the increasing demand for our agricultural staples, we shall have,—a large supply of coin from abroad, (or at least such is the opinion of those capable of judging,) at the precise moment when the operation of our army in Mexico have created a necessity for its use, and compelled our Government to send it there.

A singular speculation is put forth by the Times in relation to the effect of the potato on the Irish character. The ease with which the Irish peasant has been enabled to raise his cheap and unsubstantial food, has nurtured that wantenergy, neutralised habits of continuous industry, and these constitute the defects and the bane of the national character."

It may no doubt be said with truth, that where food is very easily raised, there will be a consequent deficiency in industry. We find this wonderfully exemplified in some parts of the West Indies; we see it in Mexico, and in the Oceanic Islands. If the Irish people in losing the potato, should be able to arrive at the successful cultivation of a greater variety of food, their condition, moral and political would be greatly improved.

With regard to the quantity of wheat which will be wanted in Great Britain, under present circumstances, it is impossible to judge with accuracy. Various Economical writers have published estimates as to the consumption—but there is a wide difference between them. Some consider the amount consumed by each individual in Great Britain is, on the average, six bushels per annum; others think it eight bushels. On recurring to tables showing the amount of foreign grain imported into England for many years past, it would appear that the average quantity of flour consumed by each person in Great Britain during a year, is from three pints to a pint and a fifth; this last being equivalent to fifteen ounces of fine flour.

There have been many cases of deficient harvests, a great rise in the price of wheat,—but the potato disease is a new and singular feature in the scarcity now come upon Great Britain; and our tables will not therefore, help us to form a true judgment as to the amount of wheat which will be required to sustain her population until another harvest. As the price of wheat has risen all over the continent we may safely calculate on the English supplies being chiefly drawn from the United States.

It is asserted in the London Corn Market, that all the foreign grain in bond in England, would not furnish the national supply for a single day, for man or beast; and that not only there, but on the continent, American wheat will be in demand.

We hope our produce and flour dealers will not delay shipments for a moment. There is margin for a large profit, and it should be embraced. We learn that several hundred sail of vessels are loading in the Black Sea for the British parts; and as prices rule here, at present, there is no doubt that an attempt will be made to import from that quarter into England. We hope our speculators will take care to realize something of the present advance. N. Y. Telegraph.
